CHAPTER: V.REFERENCES

Adwan A. (2008),The reality of workforce planning in the health sect-orhospitals the non-governmental sector in the provinces of Gaza.

Al Kudhat M. (2004),Staff selection methods in the King Abdullah Hospital founder in light of technological developments, Unpublished Master Thesis, Yarmouk University.Irbid, Jordan.

Alwan A., &Homby P. (2002), The Implications of Health Sector Reform for HumanResources Development, Bulletin of the World Health Organisation, 1(80), 11-19.

ArabhH.. (2014), Managing professionals: exploring the role of the hospital HR function Aoife McDermott, Cardiff University Business School, Cardiff, UK. Journal of Health Organization and Management, 25(6).

Bodart C., Servais G., Mohamed Y.L. & Schmidt B. (2001), The Influence of HealthSector Reform and External Assistance in Burkina Faso. Health Policy andPlanning, 16(1): 74-86.

Buckley T, Short G. andRowbottom Y. (1997), Critical IncidentReporting in the Intensive Care Unit, Anaesthesia, 52(5), 403-409.

Chan W. (2012). High performance human resource practices andorganizational performance The mediating role of occupational safety and health.Department of Management and Marketing The Hong Kong Polytechnic University,Hong Kong, China, Emerald Group Publishing Limited, Vol. 3 No. 2.

Charlene R. Weir, Bret L. Hicken, and Hank S. (2006), Crossing theQuality Chasm: The Role of Information Technology Departments, AmericanJournal of Medical Quality, Vol. 21, No. 6, 382-393.

David J. (1986), Communication Satisfaction, Job Satisfaction, and JobPerformance', Human Communication Research, pp.394-415.

Edgan, Lucas R. (2002), Fragments of HRM in hospitality: Evidence from the 1998 workplace employee relations survey. International Journal of ContemporaryHospitality Management, 14(5).

Franco L., Bennett S. &Kanfer R. (2002), Health Sector Reform and Public SectorHealth Workers Motivation: a Conceptual Framework. University ResearchCo; Bethesda, University of Arizona, USA.

Gajendra S, Kala S. and Rajesh S. (2007), Potential of Healthcare Industryin India, RNCOS, Healthcare Industry Research, 1(4), 59-64.

Glick W. (1985), Conceptualizing and measuring organizational and psychologicalclimate: pitfalls in multilevel research, Academy of Management Review,10, 601-16.

Goel S. and Kumar R.(2010), Challenges of the Administration of HospitalServices, Hospital Administration, Deep & Deep Publications, New Delhi.p.213.

Harris C., Cortvriend, P. & Hyde, P. (2007). Human resource management and performance in health care organizations, University of Manchester, Manchester, UK.Journal of Health Organization and Management, 21(4/5).

Jane L. (2004), Public Sector Reform and Demand for Human Resources forHealth, Human Resources for Health, London, UK, Nov. 2004.

Jishnu D. and Jaffrey H. (2006), Money for Nothing: The Dire Straits ofMedical Practice in Delhi, India; Journal of Development Economics, Vol.1, 37-42.

Joyce W. and Slocum J. (1982), Climate discrepancy: Refining the concepts ofpsychological and organizational climate, Human Relations, 35, 951-72.

Koys, J. and Thomas A. (1991), Inductive Measures of PsychologicalClimate, Human Relations, 44 (3), 265-285.

Kunjikannan T. &Aravindan K. (2000), Changes in the Health Status of Kerala:I987-1997. Thiruvananthapuram: Centre for Development Studies, DiscussionPaper No. 20, pp.26-36.

Linda L. and Olson, R. (1998), Hospital Nurses‘ Perceptions of the Ethical Climateof their Work Setting, Journal of Nursing Scholarship, BlackwellSynergy Publications. Volume 30 Issue 4 Page 345-349.

Marie M., Karen J. and Donna M. (2007), HRM and themanagement of clinicians within the NHS, School of Business Organization and Management, University of Ulster ,Newtownabbey, UK. International Journal ofPublic Sector, 20(4).

MarliesOtt and Han van D. (2005). Effects of HRM on client satisfaction in nursing and care for the elderly,Employee Relations, 27(4).

McConville T. (2003),The filling in the Sandwich: HRM and middle managers in thehealth sector. University of Plymouth Business School, Plymouth, UK, and LenHolden, Vol. 28 No. 5/6, MCB University Press.

Mcdemott R., Collins S., Collins K. & Matthews E. (2011), Lack of performance: The top reasons for terminating healthcare employees. Journal ofManagement, 32(3).

Mills A. (1990),The Economics of Hospitals in Developing Countries. Part I:Expenditure Patterns, Health Policy and Planning, No:5 (2), 107-117.

Mukhaimar M. &Taamenh, J. (2004). Recent trends for the hospital management: concepts and applications.

Nair G. (2003), Greying of Kerala to cause headaches, Business Line FinancialDaily, Dec. 06,.

Ozcan, Fiona E. &Geare, A. (2005), HRM practice and employee attitudes: different measures – different results, Department of Management, University of Otago, Dunedin, New Zealand, Emerald Group Publishing Limited, Vol. 34 No. 5.

Peter I., Georgianna W., Mamie W., and Ulrich B. (2005), Theolder nurse in the workplace: does age matter, Nursing Economics, Nov-Dec, 2005.

Prins and Annette (2007), Emotional intelligence and leadership in corporatemanagement: a fortigenic perspective, Department of Psychology,University of Free State, USA. 08, 23.

Ramamurthy N. (2003) Training the Angels, Healthcare Management, IndianExpress Group, Mumbai.

Ramankutty V. (1991), Development of Kerala's Health Services: the Need forBroadening the base of Policy Making, Rethinking Development: Kerala'sDevelopment Experience. New Delhi: Concept Publishing, pp.430-33.

Ramaswamy K., &Renforth W. (1996), Competitive Intensity and Technical Efficiencyin Public Sector Firms: Evidence from India. International Journal of PublicSector Management, 9 (3), pp. 4-17.

Richard G. and Feachem (2000), “Health systems: more evidence, more debate”, Bulletinof the World Health Organisation, 78(6), 78-87

Rohini R. and Mahadevappa B. (2006), ‘Service quality in Bangalore hospitals-anempirical study’, Journal of Services Research, Institute for InternationalManagement and Technology, 59-84.

Roland T., Greg L., Heather Miller, Debbie Pielack (1996),Thesatisfaction and retention of frontline employees: A customer satisfactionmeasurement approach, International Journal of Service IndustryManagement, 7 (1), 62-80.

Rosemay L., Kane R., Lum T., Cutler L., Degenholtz H. & Yu T. (2002), Resident outcomes in small house nursing homes: A longitudinal evaluation of the initial Green House program. Journal of Geriatrics Society, 55(6), 832-839.

Sahni A. (1988), Hospitals and Health Administration, Indian Society for HealthAdministrators, Vol: 1, p.143.

Salah M. (2012). Measuring the dimensions of the quality of medical services provided in the Jordanian government hospitals from the perspective of patients andstaff.

Salas E. (2003), Can teamwork enhance patient safety? Department ofPsychology and institute of simulation and training, University of CentralFlorida, 23(1), 33-45.

Valverde M. & Ryan G. (2006). Distributing HRM responsibilities: a classification oforganizations, UniversitatRoviraVirgili, Department of Business ,AvingudaUniversitat, Tarragona, Spain, Vol. 35 No. 6, Emerald Group Publishing Limited.

Varatharajan D. (2003), Public Sector and Efficiency: Are they Mutually Exclusive? AnAlternative Policy Framework to Improve the Efficiency of Public Health CareSystem in Tamil Nadu, India. Journal of Health & Population in DevelopingCountries, Toronto.

Wheelan Susan. A. (2003) Link between teamwork and patient’s outcomes in intensivecare units, American Journal of Critical Care, 25-31.